Raising Our Grandchildren & Supporting Each Other

As our adult children struggle with substance abuse, physical or mental illness, incarceration, divorce, domestic violence, or an untimely death, we step up to the plate in order to provide a vital safety net for our precious grandchildren.

At our age, raising them is an awesome task. But with the help of our local support group, we are able to combat isolation, encourage each other, and together locate and build much needed resources.

Becoming parents again has forced us to deal with all the day to day issues of daycare, school work, pediatricians, behavior problems, legal issues, finances, and last but certainly not least - our own health concerns.

If you find yourself in the position of 'parenting again' & need direction in locating help - or maybe just a soft shoulder, please give us a call. Foremost, be assured that you are not alone!

None of us could ever have imagined that we would become parents again at this stage of our lives, but here we are! We know too well the anxiety and frustration you face as you assume the responsibility and role of once again becoming a parent.

We hope you will want to join our efforts as we bring awareness to our community. As you share your experience with us and we with you, together we'll find renewed faith and hope as we face our challenges. We look forward to meeting you!
